

THE DAILY SHOCKER

CHRISTMAS EVE, 2009

Sensational Santa Revelations! Church congregation in state of deep shock!! Rudolph the red-faced reindeer!!!

Report by a Staff Reporter

A Greenford Church congregation gasped in horror as Santa walked into Church at Nativity Play time and dropped his bright red trousers.

Ladies attending the annual Nativity Play at Holy Cross Church were visibly shocked and holding their hands to their eyes to avoid observing further revelations.

Many sat in tears as this once revered Christmas figure revealed all in front of 94 innocent children and 116 eagerly awaiting adults.

Apparently unaware of his falling assets, Santa beamed cheerily at the gathered collection of forty two angels, seventeen shepherds, sixteen sheep, three wise men, travelling star, assorted cattle,

Mary, Joseph, Baby Jesus, and various extras, and looked enquiringly at the congregation, unable to understand their reaction, as incredulity turned to incoherence and eventual incapacity as grown women were seen to be rolling over in the aisles, unable to control their state of excitement.

The MC of the event made several unnecessary remarks, such as "When you hear of Father Christmas being described as pants, now you will all know the reason why!"

And as Santa left, he was asked not to frighten the reindeer with his uninhibited self-display.

Fortunately for the children, Santa had put his red trousers on over his jogging bottoms, so in the end all blushes were spared and Santa went on his way, handing out sweets with one hand and holding up his trousers with the other.

The Federation of Father Christmases, based in Lapland, have been duly informed and the matter will appear before their Standing Disciplinary Committee in the near future. If found to have brought the role of Father Christmas into disrepute, the Greenford culprit may have his costume permanently removed and banned forever from uttering the famous words, "Ho, ho, ho!"

That it should come to this!